Market Commentary

Global stocks in May advanced for the sixth time in seven months. As inflation moderated, investors grew more optimistic about the US Federal Reserve cutting interest rates later this year. Data showing US economic growth has weakened further supported that viewpoint. In addition, expectations that the European Central Bank would begin cutting rates in June contributed to the global stock rally.

US stocks advanced. Better-than-expected earnings results and enthusiasm for artificial intelligence helped fuel the rally in US equities in May. Core personal consumption expenditures were unchanged for the fourth straight month, buoying expectations for interest rate cuts. The US government reduced its estimate of first-quarter gross domestic product growth and pending home sales dropped by the largest margin in three years.

Non-US developed markets stocks rose. European stocks advanced as most investors expected the European Central Bank to cut interest rates in early June. Despite weak economic growth, annual headline inflation rose in Europe. In the UK, headline inflation dropped for the third straight month and the Bank of England hinted at rate cuts in June. Meanwhile, stocks in Japan advanced and annual headline inflation fell.

Fund Commentary

The Fund produced a solid return in May and outperformed the index return. Calendar year-to-date, the Fund is comfortably ahead of the strong index return.

The key positive contributors to performance included NVIDIA, Howmet Aerospace and Deckers Outdoor.

NVIDIA - The chipmaker's latest earnings report exceeded expectations for earnings and revenue, driven by continued strong demand for its data centre chips and additional parts to run artificial intelligence servers. NVIDIA also announced a 10-for-1 stock split that will take place in June. Shares rose in this environment.

Howmet Aerospace - Howmet provides advanced engineered solutions for the aerospace, defence, and transportation industries. The company's quarterly earnings and revenue exceeded analysts' estimates due in part to solid commercial aerospace sales. Howmet's full-year outlook was also revised higher.

Deckers Outdoor - Shares of the apparel maker jumped following the release of its financial results for the fourth quarter of 2024. The company, which includes Hoka and Teva brands, posted positive net sales with additional increases expected through 2025. A notable profit margin improvement for fiscal 2024 was also reported.

They key detractors from performance included Workday and CoStar Group.

Workday - Investor sentiment dimmed on this software provider after the company released somewhat pessimistic guidance for 2024 growth in subscription revenue. However, Workday's first-quarter sales and earnings figures topped analysts' estimates.

CoStar Group - Shares of this real estate data provider declined after an announcement that the president of its Homes.com business unit planned to leave the company.

Notable purchases in May included Stryker and McKesson.

Stryker - Organic growth is expected to improve, given a combination of a recovery in surgical procedure volumes and successful new product launches. The company continues to be a leader in the US orthopaedic market, offering differentiated products and services.

McKesson - Earnings are expected to inflect positively as the company laps a slower growth phase relating to falling demand for COVID-19 vaccines and tests. The company's growth should continue to benefit from rising prescription volumes.
